QUANTUM MARINE STABILIZERS OPENS MEDITERRANEAN SERVICE CENTRE AT MB92 BARCELONA

MB92, a world-leading group of superyacht refit shipyards, and Quantum Marine Stabilizers, an industry leader in stabilizer system design and manufacturing, today announced the opening of their second European service centre within the MB92 Barcelona Facilities.

For over a decade, Quantum's European manufacturing and service facility located in The Netherlands, handled all European service work. However, with the Mediterranean mega-yacht fleet continuing to grow, Quantum recognized the need to provide service and sales support within the region. Barcelona offers both an extensive yacht support infrastructure and quick access to the Mediterranean, representing shorter response times.

Quantum's operations are set to commence in mid-October 2020 with an initial team of service technicians, and Andrew Corbin, the Technical Sales Manager, who together, will progressively grow the new Quantum facility.

Quantum's CEO John Allen stated, "Barcelona and MB92 meet the 'centrally located' requirement to better service our clients with a shipyard that has an incredible infrastructure and capacity to accommodate all sizes of superyachts. Over the years, we have worked closely with several members of the MB92 Team and have a tremendous amount of respect for their successful operation and professional approach."

Pepe García-Aubert, President & CEO of MB92 Group stated that "we are excited to be welcoming Quantum to our Barcelona facilities. We have enjoyed a long working relationship and I am confident that this next phase will serve as a platform for further success. At MB92, we are committed to partnering with leaders in their respective fields who share our approach to providing clients a world-class refit experience. Quantum has developed an outstanding reputation for engineering excellence, service delivery and are providing innovative solutions towards a more sustainable future."
